

42 DAYS DETENTION - OPPOSED BY CONSERVATIVES

Deborah Dunleavy and the Conservatives opposed Gordon Brown's plan to extend the period someone can be held in detention before being charged. Sadly, Bolton MP, David Crausby voted in support of extending the limit to 42 days.

Deborah said: "This is a direct attack on the freedom and liberty of everyone in our community. 42 days was a figure picked out of the air. I have not seen any evidence that 42 days will prevent a terrorist attack."

Lord Ahmed, a Labour peer, said in an exclusive interview that he opposes the bill because it is in direct violation of the basic human rights and, according to the Evening Standard, Britain's most senior Muslim police officer is opposed to the Government's plans for 42-day detention of terror suspects.

Met Assistant Commissioner Tarique Ghaffur has told friends he fears the new limit would be "counter-productive" and harm the long-term battle to combat radicalisation in Islamic communities.

He believes there is "no evidence" to support an extension to the detention period of 28 days.

42 DAYS DETENTION - OPPOSED BY CONSERVATIVES

Deborah Dunleavy and the Conservatives opposed Gordon Brown's plan to extend the period someone can be held in detention before being charged. Sadly, Bolton MP, David Crausby voted in support of extending the limit to 42 days.

Deborah said: "This is a direct attack on the freedom and liberty of everyone in our community. 42 days was a figure picked out of the air. I have not seen any evidence that 42 days will prevent a terrorist attack."

Lord Ahmed, a Labour peer, said in an exclusive interview that he opposes the bill because it is in direct violation of the basic human rights and, according to the Evening Standard, Britain's most senior Muslim police officer is opposed to the Government's plans for 42-day detention of terror suspects.

Met Assistant Commissioner Tarique Ghaffur has told friends he fears the new limit would be "counter-productive" and harm the long-term battle to combat radicalisation in Islamic communities.

He believes there is "no evidence" to support an extension to the detention period of 28 days.

Deborah DUNLEAVY

Parliamentary Candidate for Bolton North East

If you have any problems or issues that you would like to discuss or have me take action on, then please contact me;

Bolton North East Conservative Association,
369 Blackburn Road
Bolton
BL1 8DY

Tel: 01204 526812

E-mail:
dd@deborahdunleavy.org

www.deborahdunleavy.org

Conservatives

Deborah DUNLEAVY

Parliamentary Candidate for Bolton North East

If you have any problems or issues that you would like to discuss or have me take action on, then please contact me;

Bolton North East Conservative Association,
369 Blackburn Road
Bolton
BL1 8DY

Tel: 01204 526812

E-mail:
dd@deborahdunleavy.org

www.deborahdunleavy.org

Conservatives