Local campaigner Tony Cox chosen to fight West Shoebury

Hard working local resident and councillor Tony Cox has been selected to fight to represent West Shoebury again at this years local elections.

Tony, 31, has lived in West Shoebury for nearly 10 years - he is married to Michele and they have a young daughter Grace.

In the past four years as your councillor, Tony has been successful in securing over £15 million in investment in Shoeburyness - this includes an adiZone for Shoeburyness Park, a brand new Youth Centre, getting Shoeburyness Leisure Centre refurbished and a new zebra crossing in Ness Road.

Tony was also central in getting the old cinema in Ness Road locally listed and a no drinking zone for the Four Rivers Estate.

For 2010, Tony has already pledged to oppose any new takeaway applications and campaign for better street lighting.

Local people betrayed by Labour!

Local Conservatives leading the debate

Over a decade of a Labour Government has left our economy in tatters and the country with record amounts of debt.

Gordon Brown got us into this mess - but doesn't know how to get us out. Labour were warned the rising level of personal debt were a ticking time bomb.

We now need a Government which makes banks keep their promises, support small businesses and help people keep their homes and tackle rising personal debt - a Conservative Government.

Through these tough times, Conservatives have been working hard to get the change and investment needed in Shoebury.

Local Conservatives have delivered on their promises and commitments to local residents to ensure Shoebury is not the end of the line.

Independent Party Watch...

Confirmed in the local press that they are a political party and will form a coalition with Labour and the Lib Dems if no party wins overall control of Southend Council

Posed as West Shoebury councillors to gain support in a recent press photo shoot.
